thinking of an individual.

e.g

1. Walk with drooping shoulders indicates discouragement.

2. A person standing with hands in pocket indicates immature behavior.

3. Turning back to someone indicates neglecting or avoiding someone.

4. Forward leaning indicates excitement or eagerness.

5. Sitting with cross legs or cross arms indicate disagreement with sender.

6. Indicating index finger indicates aggressive nature.

7. Erect walk indicates enthusiasm.

8. Standing ovation indicates appreciation.

Our postures indicate our attitude therefore a professional has to cultivate and maintain elegance in his/her sitting, standing and walking postures. Following are important tips for impressive postures:

1. Do not droop your shoulders.

2. Look straight while walking; avoid looking at the floor, outside the window or door.

3. Lift your feet clearly off while walking; avoid dragging them.

4. Don't slouch while walking, or sprawl while sitting.

5. Avoid keeping your feet at attention or parallel.

6. Avoid crossing your legs or arms while sitting or standing.

ii) Gestures:-Just as a picture can silently speak a thousand words; a gesture can communicate all that a speaker feels, consciously or subconsciously. Gesture means a motion of hand, head or limbs used to reinforce something that is said. A speaker or listener's gestures and hand movements can support and emphasize their state of mind. Gesture conveys much more than what the speaker speaks.

e.g

1. Wavingof hand indicates hello or good bye.
2. Making fist indicates anger.
3. Thumbs up shows appreciation or agreement.
4. Locking hands behind one's back indicate one's arrogance.
5. Scratching head indicates thinking.
6. Nodding head indicates acceptance.
7. Shrugging shoulders indicate indifference.
8. Upraised hand indicates request for patience.

Given below are few tips for appropriate gestures:

1. Don't scratch your forehead, eyebrows or forehead while talking
2. Avoid aggressive gestures.
3. Avoid keeping hands in pockets.
4. Hand gestures should be above waist.

iii) Facial Expression:-Face is considered "An index of mind". It exhibit attitudes. In oral face-to-face communication facial expressions becomes effective and feedback can be obtained more immediately. They convey real emotions of a person because they are involuntary hence cannot be manipulated by anyone. The face conveys many feelings like guilt, anger, grief, joy, worry, surprise, sincerity, annoyance, contempt.

e.g.

1. A smile expresses friendliness and affection.
2. Raised eyebrows convey surprise.
3. Furrowed forehead expresses worries and anxiety.
4. A frown shows dislike or suspicion.
5. Pursing lips indicates lack of confidence.
6. Smirk indicates arrogance.
7. Narrowing eyebrows indicates lack of trust in others.
8. Lines on forehead indicate worries.
9. Yawning indicates tiredness or boredom.

iv) Eye Contact:-Eyes are the windows to the soul. Eye contact is an effective means of establishing rapport with an audience. Squinting, winking, staring, gazing express different meaning.

e.g.

1. Looking into a person's eye is the best way to understand his/ her attitude.
2. Avoiding eye contact indicates the sign of fear, doubt, and nervousness.
3. While addressing a large gathering shifting of eye contact is essential.
4. Direct eye contact shows attentiveness.
5. Winking eyes indicate lying or hiding.

v) Dress and appearance:-Appearance is a blend of clothes, hair and presentation style. The kind of dress we use and our dressing pattern show status and attitude of a person. It also conveys a great deal of informationabout the person. If the choice of clothes goes wrong, one cannot expect right results. It is important to adapt appearance according to the occasion like dressing for formal, semi-formal and informal situations.

e.g.

We consider well-dressed attractive person more successful and intelligent.

vi) Vocalic:-"The study of the quality of the voice is called as vocalic". The modulation of voice can convey various meanings. It is also called as 'Paralanguage. 'Para' means like. It deals with the expression of emotions and feelings with the help of different tones of our voice. Though we cannot change our voice, there are different tones of voice which can be used to impact listeners. Voice is a very powerful tool for communication.

e.g.

1. Officer has commanding voice.
2. Singers have sweet and soft voice.
3. A nervous person has a shaky voice.
4. High pitched voice conveys sense of fear.
5. Gentle voice conveys respect, request and honor.
6. A dynamic person has resonant voice.
7. A confident person has assured voice.
8. Attractive person has pleasant voice.

Silence:-Silence is also studied under vocalic. Silence speaks louder than words do. It helps to understand relationship between communicators and their attitude towards each other.

It also helps to convey inability to converse further. Silence can be considered effective feedback.

e.g.

If a student fails to do his homework he will remain silent to the teacher's enquiries.

viii) Haptics:-It is a scientific term that indicates the sense of touch. The word 'Haptics' is derived from Greek, meaning "to touch or grasp". It conveys emotions like affection, concern, friendliness, anger, displeasure, hate, violence, happiness and encouragement.

Haptics are of two types

Negative Haptics:-Negative Haptics convey negative feelings like anger, displeasure, hate and violence.

e.g.

1. A slap, or a push expresses hatred
2. A prick communicates violent feelings.
3. A handshake with pressure indicates domination.

Positive Hapatics: - Positive haptics conveys positive feelings like love, affection, respect, encouragement, concern.

e.g.

1. A pat on the head of child indicates affection.
2. A pat on the back expresses praise.
3. A handshake implies friendliness.
4. To touch feet is to show respect.
5. Touching the shoulder is to console.